

How the electron pair in a C-F bond could be considered?

- a) Closer to C because carbon is more electronegative
- b) Closer to F because fluorine is more electronegative

In a polar covalent bond the electronic pair is attracted by the most electronegative atom. Fluorine is a more electronegative atom than carbon this is why the bond electronic pair is closer to F.